Christmas 2011

2011 proved to be another year of many firsts and was filled with much joy, lots of laughter and love. There were too many highs and lows to capture in a photo book- but this is my attempt to document our journey in 2011. Sennet is a true boy- he loves to jump and run, ride his bike, play with any type of ball and wishes he was 12 right now. He eats just about anything on any given day and overall isn't too picky about things- but he does have a hint of OCD and likes certain things a certain way. Each day is different- some days just flow really well and some days don't. The good days far outweigh the not so good and we can't imagine our life without these varying days of insanity.

Sennet is the greatest source of joy and frustration, calm and chaos, reason and insanity, serenity and agitation, certainty and doubt, determination and hesitation, belief and skepticism and the greatest reason to continue to learn and grow ourselves. It isn't always easy but is always worth it.

you can always catch my daily adventures at
